

Mary Jane Fortin

President and Chief Commercial Officer

Mary Jane Fortin is president and chief commercial officer of Thrivent, a Fortune 500 diversified financial services organization.

In her role, she is responsible for growing the organization's core business of life insurance, health insurance and annuities, with an emphasis on transforming the go-to-market strategy for the organization.

Fortin leads a division that includes all commercial operations of Thrivent: distribution, product development and management, and client and advisor service and operations. Her focus is on delivering a great customer experience through multiple distribution channels and helping more people achieve financial clarity, enabling lives of meaning and gratitude.

Before joining Thrivent in 2020, Fortin was president of Allstate's financial businesses, leading the company's life, annuity and benefits businesses. Her breadth and depth of experience spans more than three decades and includes leadership roles at several other financial services organizations including AIG, where she led American General, AIG's U.S. life insurance business; and The Hartford, where she was responsible for the company's mutual fund area along with 529 businesses. She began her career at Arthur Andersen, where she was a member of the financial services practice.

Fortin serves as vice chair on the board of LL Global, Inc., the parent company for LIMRA and LOMA. She holds a bachelor's degree in accounting from the University of Connecticut and an MBA from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. She is also a CPA.

She and her family live in the Houston area.
