

Tax Overlay Services

Year-round tax-efficient investing

The use of tax overlay services adds a customized tax optimization solution for your new or existing account(s) within Thrivent's turnkey discretionary managed account programs. Envestnet, the platform manager for Thrivent's Managed Accounts Program, will implement trade recommendations from the model provider after carefully considering the tax consequences of those transactions to your account on a discretionary basis.

Optimize your taxes

Tax overlay services offer three levels of tax sensitivity to help meet your individual tax needs.¹ Your selection will influence how significantly your portfolio may deviate from the selected portfolio (known as the tracking error) without tax overlay services. As allocation changes are made, Envestnet will evaluate the tax cost of executing those changes and may make different trades than the model. The optimization process balances the tax cost of adhering to the model, versus the potential risk incurred by deviating from the model, with the goal of delivering better after-tax performance to you.

Choose your tax-sensitivity level

Very high

This is the highest level of tax sensitivity available and seeks to deliver the lowest tax liability. This option potentially has the greatest amount of deviation from a selected model portfolio.

High

This option will deliver a higher tax liability compared to the very high tax sensitivity level with modest ongoing deviations from a selected model portfolio.

Moderate

This is the lowest level of tax sensitivity available and is intended to deliver the least deviation from a selected model portfolio with a higher tax liability compared to a high tax sensitivity level.

If you choose one of Thrivent's turnkey discretionary managed account programs and its model portfolio allocation varies from your existing portfolio holdings, there could be meaningful changes to your asset allocation, resulting in an elevated tax liability. Adding tax overlay services can help manage tax costs at a level you are comfortable with.

Scenario one

Transitioning to a model with a slight allocation change²

Let's say your current portfolio's risk tolerance level is in line with the new proposed model risk tolerance, but the forecasted difference between your portfolio and the model portfolio's returns is 5.0%.

Existing portfolio value	Cost basis	Capital gains	Potential taxes before tax overlay services
$213,000	$163,000	$50,000	($8,700)

In this example, there are several potential outcomes to consider:

Decline tax overlay services	Moderate tax sensitivity	High tax sensitivity	Very high tax sensitivity
Tracking error: 0.0% Taxes (est.): $8,700	Tracking error: 0.5% Taxes (est.): $5,900	Tracking error: 1.3% Taxes (est.): $3,100	Tracking error: 2.6% Taxes (est.): $1,700

Scenario two

Transitioning to a model with a significant allocation change²

What happens if your current portfolio's risk tolerance level is almost double that of the new proposed model? Now the forecasted deviation between your portfolio returns and the model portfolio is higher at 9.1%.

Existing portfolio value	Cost basis	Capital gains	Potential taxes before tax overlay services
$500,000	$270,000	$230,000	($48,000)

In this example, there are several potential outcomes to consider:

Decline tax overlay services	Moderate tax sensitivity	High tax sensitivity	Very high tax sensitivity
Tracking error: 0.0% Taxes (est.): $48,000	Tracking error: 0.8% Taxes (est.): $29,500	Tracking error: 1.7% Taxes (est.): $20,500	Tracking error: 2.1% Taxes (est.): $18,700
